Mr Dibb's recommendations, which he needs a bigger class of ship than the 2,000-tonne light frigate Mr Dibb recommends.

Mr Dibb also fails to address the role of air power at sea, such as the Navy's role in protecting sea lanes by saving merchant shipping can be routed well away from any enemy threat.

The main recommendations for the three services are:

ARMY

- Acquisition of up to 100 helicopters for troop lift and greater mobility. Army rather than RAAF to control helicopters.
- Placement in reserve of numbers of Leopard tanks and M113A1 armoured personnel carriers.
- Regular Army size not to be cut. Further build-up and integration of Army Reserve with regular units.
- Deployment of extra regular units to Northern Territory.

NAVY

- Replacement of destroyer escorts by up to eight 2,000-tonne offshore patrol vessels.
- Six new submarines to replace Oberons.
- New light fleet tanker.
- No refit for HMAS Hobart.
- New patrol boat base in north-western Australia.
- High priority for acquisition of mine-countermeasures capabilities.
- No platform for Sea King helicopters.

RAAF

- Dedication of one F/A-18 squadron to maritime strike role and the other to air defence. May buy more F/A-18s in the 1990s.
- Replacement of Caribou aircraft with all-Hercules fleet.
- No dedicated photo-reconnaissance squadron.
- No urgent priority for Airborne Early Warning aircraft or air-to-air refuelling capability.
- Increased surveillance by P3C Orions and retention of F-111s in the maritime strike role.

Walker names six Lib 'war criminals'

Romania, members of which had participated in murderous attacks on the Jewish community in Bucharest in 1941.

Mr Walker said that Mr. Fabian Lovokovic, who was well known in NSW ethnic circles, "to this day, is a proud promoter of Ustashi ideals within Australia."

He was a prominent member of the Liberal Party, and had fraternised openly with Liberal Party prime ministers, ministers and MPs for many years.

Documents showed that Mr Srecko Rover had been a member of the "vicious mobile courts martial in Bosnia," and had emigrated to Australia in 1950.

Mr Walker said that Mr Konrad Kaleb, a resident and later a citizen of Australia between 1950 and 1959, was wanted for mass murder in a number of villages in Latvia. He was now facing trial in the United States, and could be returned to Australia.

Mr Hurford told Federal Parliament yesterday he could not rule out that Nazi war criminals had migrated to Australia.

He said he was aware that the ABC had mentioned the name of one person believed to be a Nazi war criminal.

The third man, also a former Drug Squad officer, is Detective Senior Constable Ron Seery. Nine charges were laid against Seery, including conspiracy, theft, demanding money and assault and robbery.

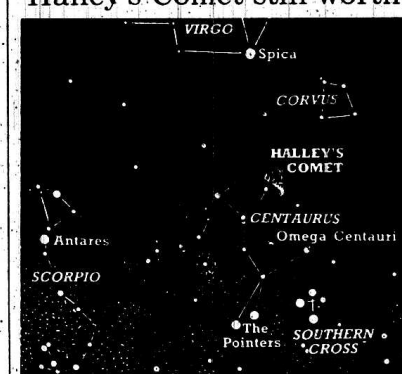

The charges relate to events that took place in 1983.

The hearing was adjourned to Castlereagh Street Court on May 12 and conditional bail granted.

Halley's Comet still worth a last glimpse

In a week when it was supposed to die away, Halley has proved worth watching. It showed a small wedge-shaped tail through binoculars from Sydney on Tuesday night and yesterday morning.

The moon will ruin the good viewing tonight until after it sets at 11.05.

The new star map, the last in the comet watch series, covers a wide sweep of sky from the easily recognisable constellation of Scorpio to the comparatively featureless area beyond Centaurus toward Corvus the crow.

Spica, at the top of the map, is the brightest star in Virgo. By the middle of the night, when the moon is gone, the Southern Cross and the bright Pointer stars will be found high in the sky looking south. As dawn approaches the comet sinks toward the south-west.
